REGISTRATION CARDS SHOULD BE GUARDED

Every man who registered on June 5 should see to it that he does not lose his registration card, cautions a deaft official. Provided the court that the muffler had gone out of draft official. Possession of a regis-tration card has come to be accepted as positive identification of its owner. A good way to insure its return in case it is lost, the official advises is to write name and address on the reverse side. Then place a 2-cent postage stamp in the upper right hand corner. If lost, the finder will probably drop it in the pencest mail-

HAS ENOUGH UNIFORM

The details of the three class Prussian electoral system—Dreiklassenwahl—have been given too often to call for elaboration here. A general idea of its result in actual practice may be obtained from the bare statement of fact that the 1998 election the conservatives, with a total of 418,398 votes, secured 212 seats, and the social democrats with 598,522 votes, secured 7 seats. The bill promised last year goes some distance in the direction of substituting a more equitable electoral system, and also of liberalizing the upper house (Herrenhaus). If the present agitation continues, we shall soon see how far the promises then made were sincere, and whether they are backed by the present chancellor.
